The English Department provides a major that not only grants a broad introduction to a range of literary and cultural study and creative activities, but also allows students to work more intensely in particular subfields of the discipline, including literary history, critical theory, film and cultural studies, linguistics, and creative writing. A degree in English develops skills in reading, critical thinking, and writing. A degree in English is not intended to provide specific vocational training but rather to give a broad education that can lead to many different careers, especially those requiring excellent communication skills and analytical thinking.

Recent graduates have gone on to careers in teaching, publishing, television, film, advertising, public relations, insurance, and government. In addition, English is excellent preparation for graduate or professional schools such as law and business.

The department offers BA, MA, and PhD degrees with majors in English. Students are able to get the BA, MA, and an 18-hour graduate certificate online. Three minors are also available, including a minor in Creative Writing.

About the Program

With more than 70 M.A. and Ph.D students, we are one of the largest and most diverse departments on the Columbia campus. We offer a wide range of course in Literature, in Creative Writing and in Language and Linguistics.

Subject Areas

Seminars, workshops and directed research are available in Literature, in Creative Writing and in Language and Linguistics.

Funding

Students admitted to the graduate program usually receive a fellowship or teaching assistantship. Outstanding applicants will also be eligible to compete for a variety of university fellowships. The deadline for applications to both the MA and PhD programs is January 1. Announcements of awards are made by early April.

Publications Experience

Students will also have the opportunity to assist faculty in editing The Missouri Review, a nationally recognized journal of fiction, poetry and essays; and Persea Books, a small, venerable publishing house.
