BA in Political Science

Degree Program Description
Political science is concerned with government, politics and public policies. In political science students learn how government operates and how to analyze and evaluate public policies and political ideas. This training can help students be more effective as active citizens, as political leaders and as government administrators. The curriculum offers opportunities to link academic study with internships and study abroad. Political Science graduates pursue many careers, some related to politics, but many others pursue other paths in a wide variety of areas such as: law, business and finance, consulting, government, public relations, media, advertising, lobbying, and international relations.

Major Program Requirements
Students must complete the University of Missouri’s general education requirements, University graduation requirements (http://catalog.missouri.edu/academicdegreetruequirements/universityrequirements/) and the Departmental Requirements (http://catalog.missouri.edu/collegeofartsandscience/politicalscience/#undergraduatetext), in addition to the degree requirements below.

Degree Program Description

Political science is concerned with government, politics and public policies. In the BA program in Political Science students learn how government operates and how to analyze and evaluate public policies and political ideas. This training can help students be more effective as active citizens, as political leaders and as government administrators. The curriculum offers opportunities to link academic study with internships and study abroad. Political Science graduates pursue many careers, some related to politics, but many others pursue other paths in a wide variety of areas such as: law, business and finance, consulting, government, public relations, media, advertising, lobbying, and international relations.

Students completing the MPA program at the Truman School are prepared for leadership in the public, nonprofit, and private sectors. Students gain competencies through the core and specialization courses that build a strong theoretical foundation in public affairs, policy, and management. Students develop rigorous analytic skills and have opportunities to apply knowledge, skills, and competencies to public policy and management issues. Through their coursework, students build knowledge of policy processes and management principles and develop critical thinking and analytic skills that enable them to advance in careers in a rapidly changing public service.

Major Program Requirements

Students must complete the University of Missouri’s general education requirements (http://catalog.missouri.edu/academicdegreerequirements/ generaleducationrequirements/), University graduation requirements (http://catalog.missouri.edu/academicdegreerequirements/ universityrequirements/) and the Departmental Requirements (http://catalog.missouri.edu/collegeofartsandscience/politicalscience/ #undergraduatetext), in addition to the degree requirements below. (Note: eligible for the accelerated program after completing 90 credit hours at the undergraduate level, with at least a 3.5 GPA.)

During years 1 through 3 students complete undergraduate general education and program requirements of at least 90 hours with a 3.5 GPA. Students may then be admitted as provisional graduate students and may take up to 15 hours of shared credit. The BA is conferred at the end of year 4. In year 5, the student completes 21 hours of MPA coursework and the MPA is conferred.

Total Credits for graduation: 156
Undergraduate credits: 120
Dual credits: 15
Graduate credits: 21
