The Department of German and Russian Studies is now a part of the School of Languages, Literatures, and Cultures. The school offers instruction in Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Russian, and Spanish. There are courses in language, culture, civilization, literatures in translation, and film. Many courses, such as civilization, culture, literature in translation, and film courses do not require knowledge of a foreign language.

The school offers the Bachelor of Arts with majors in German and in Russian, and the Master of Arts in German and in Russian Studies.

Director of Graduate Studies: Martha Kelly

The Master of Arts program in Russian Studies is a two-year, intensive course of study with emphasis on literature and intellectual history and options for cross-disciplinary coursework. Over two years, students develop a broad knowledge of Russian culture and history, with opportunities for specialized and also comparative research, as well as graduate minors in other fields. They receive careful advising and mentoring to help them develop their study, research, and career goals. Students graduate with strengthened skills in critical thought, research, oral and written communication and intercultural fluency.

Careers

Students may go on to careers in a number of fields, including policy, government work, teaching and international business; they will also be prepared to continue their studies at the doctoral level.

Facilities and Resources

The library of the University of Missouri is particularly strong in Russian literature, history and culture. We are also part of a consortium that provides quick access to the holdings of many other major academic and public libraries.

Financial Support

In this program, qualified graduate students may have the opportunity to work as teaching assistants in language, literature or civilization courses. (Occasionally students may work as Graduate Research Assistants [GRAs].) Incoming graduate students are normally offered paid positions as Graduate Teaching Assistants (GTAs) are normally appointed for one academic year (two semesters/nine months). The Fall Semester runs from late August to mid-December; the Spring Semester from mid-January to mid-May. GTA appointments are normally renewed for the second year of study when teaching and progress towards the degree are satisfactory. At present the GTA position provides a stipend of approximately $16,000 per year. In addition, tuition for courses taken toward the MA are waived for GTAs (and also qualified GRAs). Some programs require an extra form or statement from those who wish to be considered for internal assistantships, fellowships or other funding packages. Check the program website or ask the program contact for details. The Graduate School offers several valuable fellowships for which the department may nominate incoming students.

RUSS 2350: Understanding Russia through Film

How does the Russian-speaking world see itself? Europe and the United States have often viewed Russia as "other," and sometimes as an enemy or a backwards civilization. Some have viewed Russia as an "enigma," soulful and not fit for this world. In this course we will use film to explore how Russian speakers themselves understand Russia. We will watch

14 major Russian-language films from the post-Soviet era (starting in 1991) that depict moments in Russian history from the middle ages to the present. And we will critically consider what these representations of Russian history and culture suggest about Russian identity today. We will pay special attention to how Russian-language films present difference (ethnic, political, religious, gender, sexual, etc.), or "otherness," as a way of defining national identity. And we will analyze the relation of national identity constructs to social inequities. We will consider how films present groups of people within a society as "other"; how films present difference across Russian-speaking nations; and how Russia imagines itself as "other" or as a marginalized outsider. The course may be offered face to face OR in an asynchronous online format. For both versions, assignments will include watching films and responding to them in individual and small-group modes; taking open-book quizzes on brief lectures on Russian history and culture; and collaborating on a final group project to curate and create a webpage for a Russian-language film series. Students will gain foundational knowledge of Russian history and culture; will practice critical thinking through analyzing films in individual and collaborative modes; will develop written and oral communication; and will develop skills in intercultural fluency as they engage with Russian culture in its diversity.

RUSS 3390: True Fictions: Russian Prose since 1900

Survey of Russian prose fiction of the twentieth and early twenty-first century. During this time Russia experienced a series of drastic changes in society and culture, and as often happens the artists responded more rapidly and insightfully than anyone else. This was a time of radical experimentation with the very nature of literature, and we will read and examine some of the fascinating results. Course gives a short history of Russian prose fiction after 1900, offers a theory of analytical reading of imaginative prose, and hones the skills of intelligent writing about evaluative reading. Readings, lecture and discussion in English; no previous knowledge of Russian literature is assumed.

RUSS 3450: Russia @ War

One historian of Russia, Gregory Carleton, has spoken of the history of Russia as a "story of war." How have war and cultures of militarism shaped Russian history and culture? How has Russia at war shaped global politics through the ages? Russia is one of the world's imperial nations, meaning that its national identity centers its powers of expansion and domination. In our examination of Russia's "story of war" we will include the accounts of peoples who have experienced Russia's military and imperial aggression, and we will compare these accounts with Russian perspectives. Graded on A-F basis only.

RUSS 3710: Refugee and Migration Studies: A Cultural-Historical Introduction

(same as GERMAN 3710). After the US, Germany and Russia have the world's largest migrant populations. This introduction to refugee and migration studies takes both geographic centers as lenses through which to view key concepts, categories and questions relating to why groups of people move from one region or locality to another. The course is organized by types of migration -- voluntary and involuntary--even as it problematizes this distinction and many others. In particular, we will investigate how migration relates to nation-building and national identity. Topics cover movements in (what are now) Germany and Russia from about 300 CE to the present day. Students will work not only with historiographical and scholarly texts, but also with novels, memoirs, paintings and film to explore the work that cultural representations of migration do.

Credit Hours: 3

RUSS 3890: Russian and Soviet Cinema

RUSS 4820: Blogging the World: The Web in Cultural Context

(same as GERMAN 4820, FRENCH 4820). Innovative interdisciplinary course addresses issues of access to international news and specific cultural context working in cross-disciplinary teams. Students in journalism, foreign language, international studies, political science and various other disciplines track cultural developments and information on no-US Web sites, blogs and digital social networks along with exploring various historical forms of communication that preceded the digital era of the Web. Students analyze the potential and limitations/ effects of blogs and the web in specific contemporary cultural contexts and as part of the broader historical evolution of the web. The course is taught in English. The goal of this course is two-fold; students learn the particulars of web blogging, explore various features of the contemporary social network landscape while focusing on the concept of culture, in particular the cultures of Europe and the US. Questions asked are: what is culture? What is common or popular right now in other cultures? And how do new social networks amplify or alter certain features or culture across national and international contests?
