BA in Ancient Mediterranean Studies with Emphasis in Greek

Degree Program Description

The Classics major (within the Department of Ancient Mediterranean Studies) is a broad study of literature, covering a deep knowledge of the elements of language, grammar, and syntax, writing and reading skills, vocabulary building and experience with the foundational texts. Students pursuing Classics with an emphasis in Greek will have coursework that is Greek centered. Students master the grammar, syntax, and vocabulary of the Greek and/or Latin languages, for reading and writing; the distinguishing characteristics of the various styles of the poets and prose writers active during various literary periods; and the fundamental structural elements common to all languages. In addition, students learn to read and translate central Greek and Latin texts, and to identify the resources that will help them read other texts. Students completing the major will be well prepared for a variety of careers and for further study in graduate or other professional schools.

Major Program Requirements

Below are the degree requirements. These must be met in addition to college and university requirements, including University general education.

- GREEK 1100 & GREEK 1200 & GREEK 2000: Elementary Ancient Greek I and Elementary Ancient Greek II and Greek Reading (may be used to help satisfy the foreign language requirement in the College of Arts and Science) 13
- GREEK 4300: Intermediate Readings 3
- GREEK 4350-level or above 9
- CL HUM courses at the 2000-level or above 9

Semester Plan

A sample plan of study has not been designed for this major. Students should contact the academic department for assistance with academic planning.