The Film Studies Program within the School of Visual Studies provides guidance to our students from accomplished researchers and from film production faculty, real world experience through hands-on internship practicums, and opportunities for professional success beyond the program. The BA offers courses in film analysis and covers the history of cinema, national and global cinemas, film theory and genres, documentary film, and contemporary visual culture. It combines an emphasis on critical thinking, research, problem-solving, written expression, and cultural literacy with the discipline’s unique attention to visual analysis. For those who choose the Emphasis in Production, this degree provides hands-on instruction in all areas of filmmaking, including screenwriting, production management, directing, cinematography, audio, and editing. A degree in Film Studies provides a broad, comprehensive education that can lead to many different careers, especially those requiring excellent communication skills and analytical thinking. Recent graduates have gone on to careers in teaching, publishing, public relations, management, law, the TV/motion picture industry, independent film-making, advertising and other areas of digital media production.

The program offers a BA degree in film studies, a BA with an emphasis in film production, and an undergraduate minor.

Undergraduate

• BA in Film Studies (http://catalog.missouri.edu/undergraduate/collegeofartsandscience/filmstudies/ba-film-studies/)
  • with emphasis in Film Production (http://catalog.missouri.edu/undergraduate/collegeofartsandscience/filmstudies/ba-film-studies-emphasis-film-production/)
• Minor in Film Studies (http://catalog.missouri.edu/undergraduate/collegeofartsandscience/filmstudies/minor-film-studies/)

Double and Dual Majors

A film studies major can be paired with a major in another department. Students must meet the requirements of both departments. The program for each major must be approved by the advisor in the degree-granting department.

Departmental Honors

To receive departmental honors, a student must earn a minimum overall MU GPA of 3.3 and a minimum GPA of 3.5 in courses in film studies completed at the University of Missouri. In addition, with the assistance of an honors thesis advisor, the student must develop, plan and conduct research on an independent project, normally while enrolled in FILMS_VS 4995.

Graduate

While MU does not offer graduate degrees specifically in film studies, the University does offer post-baccalaureate opportunities in a number of related areas, both within the College of Arts and Science, and in the other Schools and Colleges that make up the University. The catalog provides a complete list of these degree options (http://catalog.missouri.edu/degreesanddegreeprograms/).

FILMS_VS 4370: Film Studies: The Intersection of Documentary Film and Journalism
(same as JOURN 4370; cross-leveled with FILMS_VS 7370, JOURN 7370). The popularity of documentary film in the past ten years has skyrocketed, and recent award-winning documentaries such as Inside Job (2010), Blackfish (2013), and The Invisible War (2012) are simultaneously entertaining audiences and investigating serious issues like the financial collapse, killer whale captivity, and sex crimes in the military--issues that in the past might have been covered exclusively by investigative journalism. What explains the public's growing fascination with documentary? How is documentary film reacting to recent transformations in the media landscape? Is it filling a critical need that journalism is no longer willing or able to meet? This course will explore the intersection of these two nonfiction storytelling forms--documentary film and journalism--and examine the role played by advocacy in both modes, as well as the cultural and ethical implications of the convergence between journalism and documentary film. In that it is centered on contemporary documentary film culture, the course also takes advantage of the True/False Film Festival, and will be host to a conference during Week 6, featuring a number of major visiting filmmakers and film critics. Attendance at some sessions is required. Graded on A-F basis only.
