BS in Human Development and Family Science with Emphasis in Family and Consumer Sciences Education

Our department is no longer admitting students to this emphasis area. We invite you to explore the other undergraduate degree options within Human Development and Family Science (http://catalog.missouri.edu/undergraduategraduate/collegeofhumanenvironmentalsciences/humandevelopmentandfamilyscience/#undergraduatetext).

Degree Program Description

Family and Consumer Sciences Education emphasis, prepares students to teach family and consumer sciences from birth to grade 12 in public schools. Students take required coursework in nutrition, child development, interpersonal relationships, personal finance, interior design, consumer behavior and courses from the College of Education required to become a certified teacher for middle school or high school.

Major Program Requirements

This academic emphasis requires that students successfully complete field experiences and a student teaching internship. Public schools require that students provide proof of up-to-date immunizations and professional liability insurance. Criminal background checks and other qualifications may be required depending on the school.

Due to changes from the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) that affect certification beginning in 2017, new students are not being accepted into this program at this time.

Semester Plan

There is not a semester plan built for this emphasis area.