Testing Out of Courses - Veterinary Medicine

For professional courses cross-listed as undergraduate or graduate courses, students may opt out of the course during the professional curriculum if the following conditions are met: The student took the course at the University of Missouri within three years, received an A or B, and receives instructor permission to waive the course.

Veterinary students are charged a flat rate per academic semester and testing out of a course will not result in a prorated tuition rate.