

Graduate Certificate in Global Public Affairs

Requirements

The graduate certificate in Global Public Affairs includes 12 credit hours of course work. An international public affairs experience is also encouraged for one of the courses, but not required. The required course provides students with the comparative institutional and economic foundations to understand the complexities of governance and policy making internationally. The three elective courses, selected in consultation with the director of the Global Public Affairs certificate, allow students to delve deeply into specific realms of global policy or governance. International experiences can come through an approved public affairs related internship or study abroad course.
