The Program in Ancient Mediterranean Studies, which is housed in the Department of Classics, Archaeology, and Religion, offers courses in the life, languages, cultures, and thought of the ancient Greeks and Romans. The Ancient Mediterranean Studies Program offers a BA degree with a major in Ancient Mediterranean Studies and emphasis areas in Classical Humanities, Greek, Latin, and Classical Languages as well as MA and PhD degrees in Classical Languages, Archaeology, and Classical Arts and Humanities. A minor in Ancient Mediterranean Studies is also available.

Faculty

Professor D. Trout
Associate Professor R. D. Marks, M. Mogetta, D. J. Schenker
Assistant Professor S. Yona*
Assistant Teaching Professor E. Buckingham*, J. Crozier*, J. McDonald*

- Graduate Faculty Member - membership is required to teach graduate-level courses, chair master's thesis committees, and serve on doctoral examination and dissertation committees.
- Doctoral Faculty Member - membership is required to chair doctoral examination or dissertation committees. Graduate faculty membership is a prerequisite for Doctoral faculty membership.

Undergraduate

- BA in Ancient Mediterranean Studies (http://catalog.missouri.edu/collegeofartsandscience/ancientmediterraneanstudies/ba-ancient-mediterranean-studies/)
- Minor in Ancient Mediterranean Studies (http://catalog.missouri.edu/collegeofartsandscience/ancientmediterraneanstudies/minor-ancient-mediterranean-studies/)

Major with Honors

The undergraduate program can also include 3-6 credits in an honors thesis course (AMS 4970H). These credits, in addition to major requirements and a 3.5 GPA in all AMS courses (as well as a 3.3 overall GPA), lead to a BA degree with a major in Ancient Mediterranean Studies with Honors.

Double Majors

A double major is a good way of integrating two related areas of interest, such as Ancient Mediterranean Studies, History, English, and Philosophy. Students looking forward to a career in medicine or the sciences may use a double major (Ancient Mediterranean Studies and Biology or Chemistry, for instance) to ensure a thorough background in the humanities to balance their scientific studies. Usually minor or related field requirements for each major are satisfied by major courses in the other department. Consult with departmental advisors about specifics.

Graduate

The Department of Ancient Mediterranean Studies offers graduate work leading to the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. The graduate faculty encourages applications from talented and committed students, whose undergraduate careers have given them an appreciation of the rich, many-faceted nature of classical studies and an interest in discovering a place of their own in it. Solid experience in Latin and Greek is of course desirable, but Missouri's MA program is specifically designed for students whose study in one or both of the languages may have come late and who need help getting up to speed rapidly.

Career Preparation

Graduate programs in Ancient Mediterranean Studies are designed to prepare students for professional careers as teachers and scholars of classical literature, archaeology, and ancient civilization, more broadly. Besides acquiring expertise in the traditional classical disciplines, students are encouraged to become familiar with other research areas such as later literatures and cultures, on which the classical tradition has exercised a decided effect, or with programs such as Geographic Information Science (GIS) or Archaeometry for archaeologists.

Facilities and Resources

Because MU is a contributing member of the American Academy in Rome and the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, the facilities of those organizations are available to graduate students from Missouri. Study in Athens or Rome is often feasible after the completion of a master's degree. On campus, students have at their disposal the resources of Ellis Library, which are excellent in the fields of Greek and Latin languages and literatures, Classical Archeaeology, and ancillary fields. This collection is supplemented by the department’s Labrunerie Classics Library. The Museum of Art and Archaeology contains many items of interest to classicists and archaeologists alike.

AMS 1140: Ancient Cities
Today, more than half of the world's population lives in an "urban area." More than 80% of the people who live in the United States dwell in what we call "cities." Every year, more and more people are drawn to these urban centers. Needless to say, this was not always the case. What are the historical origins of cities? What sparked the urbanization process? How were ancient cities organized, and how were they different from the urban centers today? What was it like to walk around ancient Uruk, Athens, or Rome? Ancient Cities is an introductory survey to the urban centers of the ancient Near Eastern, Egyptian, and Mediterranean worlds. We will begin with the earliest known settlements in the Near East, ca. 9000 B.C., and trace urbanization as far as Imperial Rome and Late Antiquity. The purpose of the course is to examine the characteristics of urbanism, and the archeological evidence for settlement structure, urbanization and state-formation in different cultures of the ancient Mediterranean world.
Credit Hours: 3

AMS 1150: The Archaeology of Ancient Lives
This course introduces the methods and goals of classical archaeology to explore how people lived in the Mediterranean region in the days of the ancient Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, and their neighbors. Along the way we will study parts of our own contemporary human landscape in Columbia (and maybe learn to look at columns in some unexpected ways). Classes are a combination of lecture, group discussions, and activities. Graded n A-F basis only.

AMS 1170: Heroes and Monsters: Greek Myth in the Visual Arts
Meet the heroes and monsters of ancient Greece face to face! Introduction to the artistic traditions according to which the pre-Christian Greeks depicted their myths in painting and in sculpture, combined with explorations into some of the ancient social contexts in which depictions of heroic figures and their monstrous opponents were displayed, including temples and wine-drinking parties. Comparison and contrast of ancient artifacts with medieval and modern visual adaptations of the same Greek stories, including ballet choreography and rock music videos. By the end of this course, students will have gained the ability to recognize, decipher, and interpret the coded stylistic conventions that ancient Greek artists used to visualize their myths.
Credit Hours: 3

AMS 2050: Comparative History of Greece and Rome I
This comparative survey explores the ancient Mediterranean world of Greece and Rome from the age of Homer to the eve of the crisis of the Roman Republic. AMS 2550: Farm to Table in Ancient Greece and Rome: Small Farms and Big Business (same as HIST 2550, ANTHRO 2140). From the family farm to agro-business enterprises, the production, distribution, and consumption of food in Greece and Rome anticipated nutritional, economic, environmental, and political questions familiar in the twenty-first century. This course uses literary, archaeological, and comparative evidence to explore ancient Mediterranean foodways that include diet, farming, trade, import and export, distribution, and consumption. It also considers the roles played by government in subsidizing and managing the food supply, elucidates the tensions between tenancy and ownership, and exposes the roles of slavery and gender within the ancient food economy. Overall, this course considers agricultural economics ranging from subsistence farming to the state controlled specialization required to feed the ancient Mediterranean's mega-cities.
