

PhD in Philosophy

Degree Requirements

72 hours of course work in philosophy, with at least 42 hours of regular course work.

A distribution of graduate courses including an introductory seminar for all first year students, two advanced courses in logic, two courses in the history of philosophy, and one course in each of ethics, epistemology, and metaphysics.

A written and oral dissertation proposal requirement designed to ensure the student's familiarity with the relevant philosophical literature and ability to analyze philosophical issues. A dissertation and a final oral examination on the dissertation.

Qualifying Exam

Qualification for the PhD program is established by a qualifying examination (typically by superior performance on the MA research requirement).

Note: Although we award the MA degree, we only admit students to our PhD program (with the MA obtained in the process). Any unusual circumstances regarding failure to meet the minimum requirements should be called to the attention of the Director of Graduate Admissions.

Admissions

Admission Process

In order to be considered for our graduate program, the following steps need to be completed (including receipt of transcripts and test scores) by January 15th:

1. Arrange for all relevant official transcripts to be sent directly to the Graduate School by your college or university (student copies are not acceptable).
2. For applicants submitting GRE scores (this is not required), arrange with Educational Testing Services for your GRE scores to be sent directly to the Graduate School (MU's school code is 6875; philosophy's department code is 2801). Only electronic scores are acceptable.
3. International students also should arrange for their TOEFL scores to be sent directly to the Graduate School (MU's school code is 6875; philosophy's department code is 2801). The minimum required scores are 100 (internet) total with a speaking score of at least 23 (internet). (For more information about scores, see the Graduate School's TOEFL policy.)
4. Complete the basic information in online Graduate School application.
5. Upload a 750-word Statement of Interest to the Supplemental Information section of the on-line Graduate School application form. It should explain why are you are interested in graduate study in philosophy at the University of Missouri. We encourage you to address, if you wish, how you can advance the department's commitment to diversity.
6. Upload a sample of your 15-25 page philosophical writing (e.g., a paper or thesis chapter) to the Supplemental Information section of the on-line Graduate School application form. For the sake of blind evaluation, do not include your name on the sample you upload.

7. In the Recommendation section of the on-line Graduate School application form, enter the information for three letters of recommendation regarding your academic potential. You should first obtain agreement from the professors writing these letters. They will be contacted by e-mail to submit their letters electronically. If a professor is unable to send his/her letters electronically, you should still enter all his/her information in the Recommendation section, but you should write "(off-line)" immediately after her name. In that case, a hardcopy of the recommendation should then be sent to the Director of Graduate Studies, Department of Philosophy, University of Missouri, Columbia, MO 65211-4160. Because all other materials are electronic, hardcopies often do not receive the same attention. It is thus in your strong interest to have your letters submitted electronically.
8. Complete the Department of Philosophy application form (<https://philosophy.missouri.edu/graduate-program/>).
