The faculty and staff of the Department of Psychological Sciences are committed to providing students with a high-quality, broadly-based undergraduate and graduate education. Understanding that undergraduate students use the psychology major as preparation for a variety of careers, the department is dedicated to offering a wide range of courses and professional development opportunities. While some undergraduates are interested in pursuing psychology-related interests in graduate school, most are interested in pursuing careers immediately after graduation. For graduate students, our department follows a student-focused, mentorship-based model for training in psychological science. The major emphasis of our graduate program is research, and students gain strong training in statistics and methodology. Regardless of a student's ultimate goals, faculty members believe that students will be best served by completing a rigorous research-oriented program of study. Therefore, students should expect instructors to take a scientific approach to the psychological content of each course.

The department offers the Bachelor of Arts (BA) and Bachelor of Science (BS) degrees with a major in Psychological Sciences. The Master of Arts (MA) and doctorate (PhD) degrees have emphasis in Clinical Psychology, Cognition & Neuroscience, Developmental Psychology, Quantitative Psychology, and Social & Personality Psychology.
